Meeting chef Jean-Marc

Jean-Marc is a third generation baker from a small town in Brittany, in the northwest part of France, known for buttery pastries.

As he says, "I was born in the flour". Though his father and grandfather were bread bakers who owned bread bakeries, Jean-Marc went on to become a pastrycook and cake baker.

After completing formal schooling and a four year apprenticeship with Master Pastry Chef George Merlet in Chateaubriant, France, Jean-Marc headed to the States, arriving in Cape Cod, Massachusetts in 1983.

After a while, he traveled west to Los Angeles and worked in several well known restaurants and French pastry shops before meeting his Pittsburgher wife, who promptly insisted they move to Pittsburgh.

Jean-Marc opened his bakery in Millvale in 1992.

Jean-Marc always kept his bakery small, more similar to a typical French village pastry shop. Staying small allowed him to supervise every stage of production, assuring that his high standards of quality were maintained.

Jean-Marc's daily routine is rolling dough, pounding butter and icing cakes.

Running the bakery doesn't leave much free time, but when Jean-Marc is not behind his wooden work bench, he heads down to The Millvale Riverfront Park to train for The Pittsburgh Marathon, follows local sports teams (especially Pittsburgh Penguins Hockey), and keeps track of European Football.

C'est la vie!
