THE SACRED RIVER

The river Ganges starts in west India and travels through the north into Bangladesh. It isn't very long: 2,520km. The Nile and the Amazon are longer, but the Ganges is very important to the people in India. 400 million people live near this river. It gives them food and water to use for washing their clothes or having a bath. There are more than 100 different types of fish swimming in these waters and also sharks and dolphins! The Ganges today is very dirty and the sharks and dolphins are endangered. People are in danger, too, because they also drink from the river. Luckily, there are people trying to clean the river and protect it.
