Nikola Tesla was born in Smiljani, a small village in Croatia. His parents were Serbian. When he was a little boy, he loved playing in the woods where he watched the birds.

Nikola was crazy about mathematics and science. After school, he continued studying at the Technical University in Graz, Austria. Then he studied at the University of Prague.

After finishing studying, Nikola Tesla moved to the USA in 1884 where he worked with another famous inventor named Tomas Edison.

Nikola was a brilliant inventor, and he made important experiments in physics. Many experts agree that he invented the radio and many important motors, machines and engines that work on electric energy.

He died poor on January 7th, 1943, in New York. He is best known as the Father of Electricity.

Florence Nightingale and Mother Theresa both worked a lot and helped the sick and the poor. But they didn't live in the same country or at the same time.

Florence was born in Italy, but she lived in the UK. She could speak English, Italian, French, German, Latin and Greek. As a nurse in the war she helped soldiers, taking care of the sick even at night, so they gave her a nickname: "the lady with the lamp".

She met Queen Victoria, who helped her to open a school for nurses.

Mother Theresa was born in Macedonia, but she lived in many countries, and longest in India. She was a nun. She saw lots of poor and sick people in the streets of India and decided to open a special home where she helped them. She got the Nobel Peace Prize.
