

Drag and drop the correct question:

Where does she go on holiday?

What does she do in the evening and at the weekend?

Is family important to Emma?

Do you like the same things?

What do you like about Emma?

Every week, we match two of our members and they meet for a date at a restaurant. This week's couple are Ben and Emma. We talk to them about their date.

She's beautiful and interesting. She's Spanish but she lives and works in Manchester.

We both like football. I'm a Manchester City fan but Emma likes Barcelona. That's a problem, but not a big one.

I don't think family is important to Emma. She comes from a small family. She has one brother but she doesn't have any sisters. She works for a bank and I think her work is important to her.

In the week she goes to the gym or she cooks Spanish food for her friends. At the weekend she does different things, for example she plays tennis, and I think she's very good. She loves music and films – me too!

She goes home to Spain or she goes to Italy. We both want to go to South America and Emma speaks Spanish of course. She likes beach holidays but I don't.

He's good-looking and friendly.

Ben likes computer games but I don't. He plays guitar in a group and we like the same type of music. We both like football.

It's very important. Ben comes from a big family. He has two brothers and a sister and he loves children.

He doesn't go out in the week. He checks his students' homework and he watches TV. He goes out at the weekends. We both love films and music. And he plays tennis but he says he's not very good. He plays guitar with his group.

He's a university teacher and he has long holidays. We both want to go to South America but he says it costs a lot of money. Ben doesn't like beach holidays but I love the beach.
