INEMURI

The Japanese art of sleeping at work

Most experts agree that adults should get at least 8 hours of sleep a night. However, in recent years, the number of hours people sleep has been falling steadily. The consequences of 1) can be seen in workplaces around the world where workers rely on cups of coffee to keep active and alert. But in Japan, where the average adult gets just 7 hours and 5 minutes of sleep a night, workers don't have to struggle 2) the day with heavy eyelids. Instead, they can have a short nap! The practice is called 'inemuri' and is an acceptable part of the Japanese work environment. In fact, instead of being embarrassed 3) falling asleep at work, as most Westerners would be, the Japanese are actually quite proud of it. Inemuri is viewed as a 4) that the worker is exhausted from working very hard and the practice is so respected that 5) Japanese workers pretend to be asleep at their desks! There are some unwritten rules of inemuri, however. Firstly, you must sit upright in your chair while napping so that your workmates can 6) you up easily; you shouldn't nap in front of your boss; and you 7) not nap for more than about 20 minutes a day. All in all, many experts believe the West has 8) to learn from the practice.

The Chinchilla Melon Festival

If you like melons, you might like to head to the small town of Chinchilla in Queensland in February for its biennial Melon Festival. Chinchilla produces about 25% of Australia's melons and is known 1) the country's 'melon capital'. The festival, which first took place in 1994, is held to promote the melon industry and encourage tourism in the region. However, Locals say 2) also about lifting spirits and, judging by the mayhem at the festival, it's easy to see that's the case! Thousands of visitors flock to Chinchilla every two years to 3) part in the fun days of back-to-back entertainment. Like all family-friendly festivals, there are a variety of activities for both young and old, including food tastings, parades and concerts. The real fun starts with the melon contests, though. At the Chinchilla Festival you can do 4) about anything with melons! One popular activity is 'melon skiing. Participants stick 5) feet into squishy watermelons and ski down a slope of soap and squashed melons. It's as difficult to do as it 6) and hilarious to watch.

Another crazy activity is 'melon bungee'. Players are attached to an elastic cord and race 7) other across a slippery floor to reach a melon. There are also melon Iron Man and Iron Woman contests, as well as a competition in which contestants try to break open 8) melons as they can using nothing but their head! The Chinchilla Melon Festival is one of Australia's funniest and craziest festivals, and you're guaranteed to have a whale of a time if you go. You're bound to get incredibly sticky and messy though, so don't forget to bring a change of clothes!
