You are going to read an extract from a short story about a woman called Ma Parker.
For questions 31–36, choose the best answer (A, B, C or D) according to the text.

The Life of Ma Parker

When the literary gentleman, whose flat old Ma Parker cleaned every Tuesday, opened the door to her that morning, he asked after her grandson. Ma Parker stood on the doormat inside the dark little hall, and she stretched out her hand to help her gentleman shut the door before she replied. 'We buried him yesterday, sir.' Poor old bird. She did look heartbroken. 'I hope the funeral was a – a – success,' he said. Ma Parker gave no answer. She bent her head and hobbled off to the kitchen.

It would take a whole book to describe the state of that kitchen. During the week the literary gentleman 'did' for himself. That is to say, he emptied the tea leaves now and again into a jam jar set aside for that purpose, and if he ran out of clean forks, he wiped over one or two on the towel. Otherwise, as he explained to his friends, his 'system' was quite simple, and he couldn't understand why people made all this fuss about housekeeping.

'You simply dirty everything you've got, get someone in once a week to clean up, and the thing's done.'

The result looked like a gigantic dustbin. Even the floor was littered with toast crusts, envelopes, cigarette ends. But Ma Parker bore him no grudge. She pitied the poor gentleman for having no one to look after him. Out of the smudgy little window you could see an immense expanse of sad-looking sky, and whenever there were clouds, they looked very worn, old clouds, frayed at the edges, with holes in them or dark stains like tea.

While the water was heating, Ma Parker began sweeping the floor. 'Yes,' she thought, as the broom knocked, 'what with one thing and another I've had my share of misfortune. I've had a hard life.'

Even the neighbours said that of her. Many a time hobbling home, she heard them, waiting at the corner, or leaning over their fences, say among themselves, 'She's had a hard life, has Ma Parker.' It was true and she wasn't in the least proud of it. A hard life!

At sixteen she'd left Stratford and come up to London as a kitchen maid. Yes, she was born in Stratford-on-Avon. Shakespeare? People were always asking her about him. But she'd never heard his name until she saw it at the theatre.

Nothing remained in her memory of Stratford except 'sitting in the fireplace to see the stars through the chimney' and 'Mother always had her joint of meat hanging from the ceiling'. And there was something – a bush at the front door – that smelt ever so nice. But the bush was very vague. She'd only remembered it once or twice in the hospital, when she'd been taken bad.

And that was an awful place – her first place of work in London. She was never allowed out. She never went upstairs except for prayers morning and evening. And the cook was a cruel woman. She used to snatch away her letters from home before she'd read them and throw them in the fire because they made her dreamy. And the beetles! Would you believe it? Until she came to London, she'd never seen a black beetle. Here Ma always gave a little laugh. Not to have seen a black beetle! Well! It was as if you said you'd never seen your own feet.

When that family sold up, she worked as 'help' at a doctor's house, and after two years there, running around from morning till night, she'd married her husband.
