Task 1: Read the text and answer the question:
Charities

Charities are organizations which collect money for people who need help. Oxfam is a charity that helps people all over the world. It started in Oxford in 1942 with another name. Then the name soon became Oxfam. Today, Oxfam works in more than 70 countries around the world to make people's lives better. It helps people who are poor, hungry or in trouble. Oxfam sends helpers to different countries to work with local people and to solve their problems. They train health workers, build schools, provide food and places to stay in. Oxfam also helps people in natural disasters like floods and hurricanes. Oxfam also has lots of shops all over the world. They sell second hand clothes, shoes, jewellery, toys, books, old furniture and so on. The volunteers work in these shops. The items sold in these shops come from the volunteer people too. They bring the things that they don't need and donate them for free. Oxfam sells these things in its shops and uses the money for people who need help.
