

Teens vs Adults: Who's the Champ?

Believe it or not, there are some things teens are actually better at than adults! Don't worry grown-ups, we still need your wisdom and experience, but check out these areas where teens might just have the upper hand:

- Learning Languages: Teens' brains are like sponges, soaking up new information quickly. This makes learning languages much easier.
- Technology: Teens are digital natives, comfortable with technology from a young age. They can pick up new gadgets and apps in no time.
- Creativity: Teens often have a fresh perspective and a willingness to experiment. This can lead to some truly creative ideas!
- Energy: Let's face it, teens have seemingly endless supplies of energy. This can be a great asset for tackling challenging projects.

This quiz tests your understanding of the text about teenagers' strengths. Choose the best answer for each question.

1. According to the passage, why are teens good at learning languages?

- a) They have more time to study.
- b) Their brains are better at absorbing new information.
- c) They have a wider vocabulary.

2. What advantage do teens have when it comes to technology?

- a) They are more careful with their devices.
- b) They are familiar with technology from a young age.
- c) They spend less time online.

3. The text says teens are often creative because they are:

- a) afraid to make mistakes.
- b) willing to experiment.
- c) very logical thinkers.

4. How does the passage describe the energy levels of teenagers?

- a) They get tired easily.
- b) They have limited energy for activities.
- c) They often have a lot of energy.

5. What is the MAIN purpose of the text?

- a) To argue that teens are better than adults.
- b) To show how adults can learn from teens.
- c) To explain why teens are difficult.

