The Teacher

At school I was good at maths but at university I studied languages. More difficult than maths but also more interesting. I studied German and French. I can speak German and Italian now but not French.

Now I'm a teacher. I teach English and sport and I work in different countries. Last year I taught in Italy. I'm teaching in England right now but all my students come from China. I work six days a week for five hours every day. I always give my students a lot of homework, about two hours a day. I teach adults and children. I like working with adults more than with children. I enjoy playing football best but my students like basketball better. I like tennis too but I don't play it very often.

Jane: Hi Dave! It's Jane Cooper. Remember me from our company's international sales conference in Berlin earlier this month?

Dave: Yes, of course! What a surprise! It's lovely to hear from you.

Jane: Thanks. Well, I'm flying into London for the weekend and wondered if you fancied meeting up?

Dave: I certainly would! In fact, I've got tickets to see a new play on Saturday night. What about having dinner first somewhere and then going to the performance together?

Jane: Brilliant! Let me know when and where to be. I'm staying at the White Bear Hotel on Baker Street, which is nice and central.

Dave: Yes, I know it. Well, I can pick you up just before 6. We can go to a fabulous Asian restaurant I know.

Jane: Sounds wonderful!

Dave: The restaurant is only 10 minutes' drive away from the hotel. I'll book us a table for 6.15. It's just round the corner from the theatre, so we'll have plenty of time before the show begins at 7.45.

Jane: Here's my mobile number in case you need it - 97681 321001. Otherwise, see you then!

Dave: Got it. Great! See you on Saturday!

Jane: Bye!
