The Boston Marathon

Every year on the third Monday in April, people from all over the world compete in the Boston Marathon. The first race was held in 1897, inspired by the success of the first modern-day marathon of the 1896 Summer Olympics. Apart from being the world's oldest annual marathon, it is also one of six major ones held around the globe.

The Boston Marathon was originally a local event, but over the years has attracted a growing number of both professional and amateur runners from all 50 states and over 90 countries. Back in 1897, only 18 people competed; however, nowadays the event attracts an average of 20,000 participants each year. And, with about 500,000 spectators each year, it is also the most popular sporting event in New England and the second biggest single-day sporting event in the US, just behind the Super Bowl.

The race is always held on Patriots' Day, a state holiday in Massachusetts that commemorates the anniversary of the Battles of Lexington and Concord on 19th April, 1775. Until 1969, Patriots' Day was every 19th of April, whichever day of the week that fell on. However, in 1969 the holiday (and the Boston Marathon itself) was moved to the third Monday in April, now known as 'Marathon Monday' by local residents.

The Boston Marathon even offers the challenge to disabled people. In 1975, the Boston Marathon became the first major marathon to include a wheelchair race. In addition to this, it also has a race for the blind and visually impaired.

The Boston Marathon is a difficult race and consists of 26 miles and 385 yards of winding, hilly suburban roads, as well as the busy city streets of Boston city centre, where the finish line is located at Copley Square near the Boston Public Library.

1. The first modern-day marathon was held in 1897. ☐
2. The Super Bowl is more popular than the Boston Marathon. ☐
3. The Boston Marathon is always held on 19th April. ☐
4. The Boston Marathon has always had races for disabled people. ☐
