Bruno's Dream

Bruno Serrano was a nine-year-old boy from São Paulo, Brazil. His mother, Beatriz, was a high school teacher. She taught Bruno to snorkel when he was six years old. A year later, she took him on a speedboat to see the beautiful Iguazu Falls of Brazil and Argentina.

São Paulo is in an area called the Atlantic Forest. This area stretches from the eastern tip of Brazil to Paraguay and Argentina. Bruno loved hiking in the forest more than anything. The different plants and animals astonished him, and he enjoyed spending time deep in the forest. However, Bruno's mother told him that about eighty percent of the original forest was gone. People removed many of the trees and sold them. They turned the forest into farms. Every year more of the forest disappeared. The forest was shrinking quickly.

One day Bruno was hiking with his mother in the forest when they saw large machines cutting down trees. He watched as a beautiful, enormous, old tree fell to the ground with a loud boom.

"Oh, no! They're destroying the forest!" shouted Bruno. "How can they do that?"

"They're outside of the park border," his mother explained. "Unfortunately, we can't do anything to stop them."

Think
Ask yourself an open-ended question about forests.

"I have to do something," said Bruno. "We've hiked here since I was little."

Back in São Paulo, Bruno started a petition at his school. It asked the government to help save the Atlantic Forest. Students from other schools heard about Bruno's petition. Hundreds of children signed it. Bruno then sent it to the city council of São Paulo. Soon a new law kept more of the forest safe around the city.

"It's my dream to protect all of the Atlantic Forest someday," said Bruno.

Think
Ask yourself an open-ended question about petitions.

"Don't give up, and your dream will come true," said his mother.

The Last Picture

Sini woke up to the sound of birds in the trees. She was spending a week with her grandfather in the taiga of Finland.

"Good morning!" her grandfather said. "After breakfast, we'll hike through the forest. Don't forget your camera." Sini wanted to take a picture of a moose before she returned home.

While they were hiking, Sini heard a splash behind her. She turned to see a brown bear on the other side of a small lake. She quickly took its picture.

For six days Sini fished and hiked with her grandfather. She took many pictures. However, no moose appeared.

On her final day, Sini and her grandfather went fishing for the last time. Her grandfather fell asleep, but he woke up to Sini's voice.

"Be very quiet, Grandpa," she said. She pointed the camera toward him and took a picture.

"I'm sorry you haven't seen a moose," her grandfather said.

Sini pointed proudly to her camera. There in the picture, far behind her grandfather, was a large moose. Sini's last picture in the taiga was the best of all!
