II Read the text and decide who mentions the following by putting a tick (✓) in the correct box.

Many online education providers make up for the lack of social interaction between students by providing a student forum where the students can communicate and share their ideas. Below we discuss the benefits of online forums.

For a course provider, online forums can be a beneficial aid to their courses. Professor Martin states, "I know who my top students are simply by looking into the online forum. They'll be the ones engaging in conversation, starting threads and participating regularly. From personal experience, the students who have a good online presence, generally do better than those who don't."
