brittanica.com – The Article "Nile River" – Encyclopedia Britannica

The Nile enters South Sudan at Nimule, and from there to Juba—a distance of some 120 miles—it is called the Al-Jabal River or Mountain Nile. This section of the river descends through narrow and over a series of rapids, including the Fula (Fola) Rapids, and receives additional water from short on both banks; it is not commercially navigable. Below Juba the river flows over a large and very level clay, which extends through a narrow with hill country on either , lying some 1,200 to 1,500 feet (370 to 460 metres) above sea level, and through the centre of which flows the main
