Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions from 41 to 45.

A food critic is a professional writer who tries food and writes about it. They may also be called a food writer or a restaurant reviewer. Most of the time, food critics go to different restaurants, order a range of dishes, and write about what they ate. There are people who review food for newspapers, magazines, blogs, and websites. But not every job in this field pays well or even pays at all. Food writers who are just starting out might send in unpaid reviews at first just to get a byline and build up their list of published works. Some food critics get their start by posting about their food and dining experiences on social media.

Top food writers can try new foods all over the world. Some of these experts have their own shows on TV. Food experts who do well can also put their work in books. This is a highly coveted career with a limited number of paid openings. Those who want this job need to be willing to put in a lot of hard work and time.

Here are the salary ranges for each job:

- Journalist: $36 per hour
- Reporter: $41,869 per year
- Staff writers: $38,716 per year
- Content writers: $17.54 per hour
- Total salaries: from $7.25 to $74.45 per hour

Because this is such a small field, there isn't much information about how much food writers make. But there is information for journalists, reporters, staff writers, and content writers, whose jobs are similar to those of food reviews. Many food reviewers only write about food part of the time. When they're not reviewing restaurants, they work as full-time journalists or reporters who cover other topics.

41. What can be the title of the passage?
 - A. How Food Critic Organizes Their Work
 - B. Exploring the World of Food Critics
 - C. Food Critic- A Highly Stressful Job
 - D. Being a Food Critic Changes Lives
42. The main role of a food critic is _____.
 - A. to travel the world and try new dishes
 - B. to write about their food and dining experiences on social media
 - C. to try and review food, and write about their experiences
 - D. to publish their work in books
43. According to the passage, all are true EXCEPT _____.
 - A. The salary range for food critics is not specified.
 - B. Food critics earn higher salaries than journalists and content writers.
 - C. Some food critics may not receive any payment for their work.
 - D. Food critics often work as full-time journalists or reporters to supplement their income.
44. The word "coveted" in the passage can be replaced by _____.
 - A. unwanted
 - B. desired
 - C. responsible
 - D. limited
45. What can be inferred about the number of full-time positions available for food critics?
 - A. There is a high demand for full-time food critics.
 - B. Most food critics prefer to work part-time.
 - C. Full-time food critic jobs are highly competitive.
 - D. Getting a bachelor's degree surely make you sought-after.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions from 46 to 50.

Everyone remembers their first job. Even if you are in high school, traditional employment isn't the only route to earn extra cash. You can also get creative and seek out paying opportunities through online jobs for teens to help build your bank account. Here's a wide array of opportunities to make money as a teen. Some are traditional jobs, while others require you to strike out on your own to find work. You can find full-time gigs, part-time jobs or online options in these creative ways

Tutor Online: Although many professional online tutoring services will only hire you if you're at least 18, you can still look for your own clients. Put up a flyer or spread the word in your neighborhood. You can offer your services as long as you know more than the person you're tutoring. Students most often need tutoring in English, math and science, so if you're a whiz in any of those subjects, you can likely get paid for your knowledge, especially if you're tutoring younger students in subjects you just went through.

Stream Video Games: Maybe your parents won't lecture you about how many video games you're consuming when you show them your paycheck for it. Popular platforms like YouTube or Twitch will allow you to stream your video gaming session to a live audience. If you build a solid following of subscribers, you can earn money for it and also become more known in the gaming community, especially Facebook site, which could create other opportunities.

Become a Freelancer: If you have started a blog or honed skills like writing, digital animation, graphics design, photography, calligraphy or drawing, you can likely use it to earn money as a freelancer. Fiverr is an online freelance marketplace where you can sign up and create a profile to sell your services to people from all over the world who need them. As long as you are at least 13 years old, you can use Fiverr to promote your freelance services.

Resell Vintage Clothing and Accessories: To make this gig work, you'll need to spend some time visiting thrift stores and places like Goodwill or the Salvation Army to find vintage clothing and accessories you can resell for a profit. Consider asking elderly relatives if they would be willing to part with some of their vintage items to help you get started. Good places to sell vintage clothing and accessories are D-Pop, Facebook Marketplace or Etsy.

However, if you opt for the traditional route to make money, put your best foot forward when filling out job applications and attending interviews to make a shining first impression. And once you have a job, do your very best so that your supervisor will be willing to promote you or give you a good reference when you move on to another job.

46. According to the passage, teens can offer online tutoring services by _____.
 - A. signing up on professional tutoring platforms
 - B. advertising their services in the neighborhood

 - A. someone working officially for a company
 - B. an individual who offers their services independently
 - C. a profession digital creator and graphic designer
 - D. a person who creates freelance marketplace
49. According to the passage, where can teens sell their vintage clothing and accessories?
 - A. Lazada and Shoppe Platform
 - B. Facebook Marketplace and D-Pop
 - C. Goodwill and Salvation Army websites
 - D. Etsy and Facebook Gaming site
50. Why might it be useful to ask elderly relatives for vintage items?
 - A. They are usually willing to give items for free.
 - B. They may have valuable vintage items to give you.
 - C. They have more time to spend at thrift stores.
 - D. They are experienced in reselling clothing and accessories.
