Glen Stephens, 24, and his friend Gaby, 23, are mountain climbers. They work hard in their jobs, but in their free time they travel to other countries and climb very dangerous mountains. Their last trip was to the Himalayas in Nepal, to climb one of the highest mountains in the world. On a day in July, on their second week there, they were climbing when the weather changed. Snow fell and it was terribly cold. 'We can't do it, it's too difficult', Tom thought as he went into his tent for the night. They were exhausted. Nobody knew they were there and their families thought they were dead. But they resisted and two days later, there was a miracle: the weather changed and, on a clear afternoon, they got to the top of the mountain. A helicopter rescued them some hours later. Glen and Gaby still go climbing and teach other people about their experiences.

1. The passage is about one of Glen and Gaby's mountain climbing experiences.
2. They love mountains.
3. They couldn't reach the top of the mountain at first because of the weather.
4. They had a very bad experience in the Himalayas.
5. Finally, they left the top of the mountain by helicopter.
