XVII. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

For years, charities across the globe have been encouraging students to join their volunteering programmes to help make a difference in the world. Volunteers are an integral part of any charitable organization; without them, there would be no charity. Not only can volunteering benefit a wealth of causes, but it can also boost a student's prospects once they head out into the working world.

Volunteering can be a humbling experience, allowing you to see the world in a different way. Whether you agree to volunteer for a number of consecutive months or a day a week, the impact you have could be life-changing. There's also a strong sense of achievement and pride that comes with generously giving up your time for a worthy cause.

When it comes to volunteering, there are countless opportunities at home or away. Many students choose to volunteer abroad to experience a new culture and learn more about other countries. It can be a wonderful way to experience another country, with support and guidance during the stay of the organizations. Volunteering overseas involves more group-based work than volunteering at home. It also gives students the opportunity to get away from their studies and work responsibilities.

At home, opportunities are likely to be helping with youth clubs, childcare support, medical support or charity shops. Working for a cause while at home will allow for flexibility around a student's timetable, they may be able to give up some of their spare time at the weekend or a few hours in the evening.

What to expect from NGO volunteering abroad?

NGO (non-governmental organisation) volunteer jobs are a great option for enthusiastic and flexible volunteers who want to experience a variety of projects abroad. Projects can range from education and gender equality to environmental conservation and public health. Where you volunteer is decided based on a mixture of your skills and interests, and where there is the most need for help at the time.

International Volunteer HQ's NGO Support projects in Cambodia, Ecuador, Nepal and Romania enable you to take on a range of tasks. These can include marketing, photography, research, fundraising events, team building, community development, technology support, website development, teaching English and general administration.

International Volunteer HQ's Creative Technologies projects in Croatia, Italy and Spain give you the opportunity to work with an NGO and use your technical and marketing skills to create campaigns that encourage the local community to take action in their own surroundings.

Why volunteer for NGOs abroad?

The positive initiatives of NGOs are often limited by financial and staffing resources and rely heavily on international funding drives. Therefore, the support of IVHQ volunteers is invaluable in supporting NGOs to further their efforts within the community and work towards the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals.

Whether you want to help local children from low-income communities get better access to the basic necessities of life in Ecuador or use your creative skills to raise public awareness for NGOs in Europe - this is a unique opportunity to use your skills as a force for good.
