Heather didn't really have any friends. She was an orphan and had spent the first few years of her life with a succession of foster parents. When she was ten, she was adopted but the years of being sent from place to place had left their mark and she was nervous, shy and very stubborn. Just like me. I come from a wealthy family. My father has a good job and my mother spends her days doing voluntary work for a number of good causes. It's true that I rarely saw them as I was growing up and it's also true that they argue a lot, usually over the amount of time my father was away at work. He sometimes said that he would retire but my mother didn't want her cosy routine to be disrupted much! Who was against the writer's relationship with Heather?  [.....] A Her adoptive parents.
