Miss Cooley's Corner

I was sad because I failed my English exam. I wanted to talk to my friend about it but she just laughed at me. I don't know why she did this.

Sally Chan, 5C

: Maybe your friend has problems of her own. You should talk to her and tell her you felt upset when she laughed at you. A true friend will listen to your worries. A problem shared is a problem halved. I hope your friend will listen to you.

Yesterday I fought with my friend in the playground. We both wanted to play on the swing. I feel terrible now. I hope I can make up with him. How do I do this?

Peter Lee, 4A

: Nobody gets on all the time. Say sorry to your friend. I hope you won't fight with your friend again.

We have a new 'friendship bench' in the playground — please use it! If you have nobody to play with, you can sit on this bench. If you see somebody on this bench, please play with him or her. I hope you will meet new friends on the 'friendship bench'.

Miss Cooley

Yesterday I was mean to my little sister. She couldn't do her homework and asked me a lot of stupid questions. I didn't want to help because my favourite TV programme was on. I was angry and shouted at her. I feel bad now.

Alan Leung, 6B

My family moved to Hong Kong recently and I started this school last week. I don't know anybody. All the other students already have friends and I don't have anybody to play with. What should I do?

Bessie Wang, 5D
