

Magda walked into the shopping centre feeling excited. She heard there was a big sale. The first shop she entered had colourful signs everywhere, saying discount and special offer.

Magda was happy when she found a beautiful dress with a price tag that said "50% off". It was a great deal. She decided to buy it. At the counter, she asked the cashier if she could use her coupons. The cashier smiled and said, "Yes!". Magda saved more money with the extra discount.

After paying, Magda got a long receipt with details of what she bought. Leaving the shop, she saw another store with a "Buy One Get One Free" offer. She couldn't resist and went inside to look. In the store, she found a nice pair of shoes. Sadly, they didn't fit well. She asked the shop assistant if she could return them if needed. The assistant said she could get a refund with the receipt. Magda felt better and bought the shoes.

In another shop, she found items with a discount code. She made sure to scan the code at the till. It seemed like every corner of the shopping centre had something special.

By the end of the day, Magda was tired but happy with all her purchases. She loved every bargain she found but was most pleased with her new dress. It had been a day full of sales, coupons, and special offers, and her wallet wasn't much lighter, thanks to all those discounts.

What was the main reason Magda went to the shopping centre?

Which of the following did Magda find in the first shop she entered?

How did Magda save more money at the first shop?

What did Magda find in the second shop she visited?

How did Magda save money in the third shop?

What was Magda most pleased with after her shopping trip?

What impression did Magda have about the shopping centre overall?