Nairobi: The new business city

In the last few years, the capital of Kenya has become recognized around the world as a place for new businesses and new ideas. In particular, Nairobi is now a popular city for small businesses that have a focus on technology. ¹ _____ Encouraged by government support and interest from outsiders willing to invest money, this new generation is prepared to take risks and create new products for the local market.

There are many reasons for Nairobi's success. ² _____ Nairobi also has the right balance of creative people and support from global IT companies, universities, the government and the local business community. Many young Kenyans have been starting up new businesses and aren't afraid to take risks in the hope of being successful.

Some experts even think Kenya may soon overtake South Africa as the technology centre of Africa.

⁵ _____ While Kenya has so far focused on its own region, South Africa does more international business. But the future is certainly looking good for young business-minded Kenyans. As long as the government continues to support them, it may just be a question of time before Nairobi becomes the new tech centre after all.
