One sunny afternoon, Lisa and Tom decided to visit the park. They loved spending time outdoors. Lisa brought her new kite, and Tom carried his soccer ball. When they arrived at the park, Lisa ran to the open field and began flying her kite. It soared high in the sky. Tom, meanwhile, started playing soccer by himself, kicking the ball back and forth.

Suddenly, a strong wind blew, and Lisa's kite got stuck in a tree. "Oh no! What should I do?" she said to herself. Tom noticed Lisa was in trouble, so he ran over to help. Together, they tried to get the kite down. Luckily, a friendly man who lived nearby saw t hem and said, "Let me help you."

The man, who was very tall, reached up and pulled the kite out of the tree. "Thank you so much!" Lisa and Tom said. "You're welcome," the man replied with a smile.

After the kite was safe, Lisa and Tom continued playing in the park. They had so much fun that they didn't want to leave. At sunset, they finally decided to head home, tired but happy.
