Elvis Presley was born in a small town of Tupelo, Mississippi in 1935. He had a twin brother who unfortunately died when he was young. He moved to Memphis, Tennessee with his family when he was only 13 years old and started to listen to local musicians.

From early on Elvis fell in love with music which he was strongly passionate about. He was a polite, friendly and hard-working boy who was also ambitious wanting to become a star. In later years, he was extremely generous using his millions to help out friends, family and strangers.

Growing up, his family was very poor and did not have enough money for new clothes or new musical instruments. He struggled early on to hold down a job during the day while singing and rehearsing at night. He also had many critics who did not like his new music style or way of dancing. This lead to him being forced to join the army and living in Germany.
