In November 2016, Kevin Newton's Bus Shelter opened its doors for the first time on the Isle of Wight in the UK. It's actually an old double-decker bus that Kevin changed to be a place where people can live, sleep and cook. The bus is located in the peaceful suburbs of the island's main town and is open 24/7. Anyone who doesn't have anywhere to sleep can head to the bus and expect a warm welcome.

Kevin's goal was to make it unnecessary for people on the Isle of Wight to sleep outside. Anyone without a place to sleep can live in the shelter for as long as they want if they're willing to follow the Bus Shelter's rules. Residents are required to get help from local agencies who help homeless people find housing and jobs. They also have to do paid or voluntary work to keep the bus running. So far, the Bus Shelter project really seems to be having a positive impact on the Isle of Wight. Kevin hopes that people in other parts of the UK will start using old buses to house the homeless soon, too.

- a. Kevin Newton is the first person the Bus Shelter helped. F
- b. The Bus Shelter on the Isle of Wight closed in November 2016.
- c. The Bus Shelter is a type of restaurant.
- d. Kevin made changes to the bus so homeless people could stay there.
- e. The people staying at the Bus Shelter can cook there.
- f. The Bus Shelter is in the center of the Isle of Wight's main town.
- g. The Bus Shelter is always open.
- h. The people who stay on the bus can work there if they want to.
- i. Kevin wants there to be no need for people on the Isle of Wight to be homeless.
- j. The Bus Shelter is having a positive effect on the lives of people on the Isle of Wight.
- k. People in other parts of the UK are now using old buses as homes for the homeless.
