THE INDEPENDENT

Life as a hermit: 'My life is a great adventure'

For nearly 30 years, Jake Williams has lived as a hermit in the Scottish wilderness. He explains why he could never go back to a 'normal' life.

1. I always fancied being a hermit. There was a tradition in the 18th century to pay hermits to live on your grounds and entertain the guests; I would have liked that. I live alone in an old house in the Scottish wilderness, near Aberdeen.
2. I've lived like this since I got the house 30 years ago. I did it because I was sick of dealing with landlords. I was living in Aberdeen with friends, we'd made the place nice and then suddenly had to move out. It was a nightmare. I decided to save money and buy the first place that I could afford. I always thought people would come and live with me eventually - I'm not impossible to live with, I'm very friendly - but it just hasn't happened yet.
3. I don't think my life is unconventional. At first I worked in order to save up - I didn't want to take out a mortgage. I moved in the first day I got the place. There weren't any windows and it was very damp. Nobody had lived there for 20 years. I started making fires and making the house dry. That was about Halloween so I needed to get it ready for winter. It was a happy adventure.
4. I've got a garden with a lot of kale - it's like a primitive cabbage. It's 1,000ft up where I live and that affects the climate. I'm not very good at growing carrots here, but I've got a lot of redcurrants. I consider myself to be a hunter-gatherer, so when I see some wood, I pick it up. I don't like to miss a chance to get something for nothing. I like to do a lot of different little jobs. I am always busy boiling a pan of potatoes on the fire for tomorrow or looking for something I've lost.
5. I've always had an open house and people visit me. I've been in Scottish dance bands, I write letters and freelance articles for a magazine and I even represented the Green Party in the elections earlier this month - I got 6 per cent of the votes, which they told me is quite good. But mostly I spend my days alone.
6. Summer is the best time. You can go outside and cook with an outdoor fire. It's lovely. It's an easy life. If I want to stay at home I can. I stock up on food and firewood so I won't starve if I don't go out.
7. Three winters ago a guy from Latvia was with me and the cold was nothing to him. We went skiing in the hills and had a great adventure. Having two people was good because we could keep the fire nice and toasty.
8. Then two winters ago it was a hard life... it was a hard winter everywhere. Somebody had tried to sue me and I had to go to Aberdeen to the court. I had to ski for six miles, then stay with a friend and then ski six miles back home regularly for about five months. When I came home, the fires were out and I was cold and wet. It was a nightmare. It's usually not that hard, that year was the exception, but I've survived.
9. To me, this seems like normal life. Having a career seems strange. My main reason for doing this is just meanness. It is not enough to work in a job and take money home. This seems more straightforward or easier than that. It sounds sort of depressing, but it's not - it's a great adventure.
