There is a little boy named Tim. Tim is seven years old. He lives with his mother, father, and sister. His father is a teacher, and his mother is a nurse. Tim loves to play with his sister, Lily.

One day, Tim's teacher asks the class to draw a picture of their family. Tim accepts the challenge with a big smile. He wants to achieve the best drawing in the class.

At home, Tim sits at the kitchen table with his crayons. His mother allows him to use all the colors he needs. Tim starts to draw. His father answers some of Tim's questions about colors and shapes.

As Tim draws, his sister Lily appears beside him. She wants to help. But sometimes, they argue about where to put the colors. They solve their problem, and Tim continues to draw.

Suddenly, a problem arises. Tim cannot decide how to draw his father's glasses. He feels a little sad. But then, his mother arrives and gives him an idea. She asks him to draw the glasses with a simple circle.

Tim follows her advice, and the drawing is complete. The next day at school, his teacher sees the picture and is very proud of Tim. She shows it to the whole class. Tim feels very happy and proud. He achieves his goal and learns that asking for help is always a good idea.
