

1. The practice of creating and sharing video blogs, often about personal experiences or daily life.
2. A perspective that encourages innovative thinking about future technologies and their potential to improve society. _____
3. They can inspire innovation and motivate advancements that improve quality of life. _____
4. An imagined perfect society where everyone is happy and works well together. _____
5. A proposed solution to potential job losses due to automation. _____
6. Excessive use of platforms like Facebook and Instagram. _____
7. The feeling of being disconnected or alienated from others, often leading to loneliness. _____
8. Increased time spent online to feel satisfied or anxiety when unable to access the internet. _____
9. It can lead to a lack of awareness of important facts and a narrowed perspective. _____
10. The tendency to seek out information that reinforces one's existing beliefs while avoiding contradictory information. _____
11. A structured environment, such as residential treatment centers, that provides supervision and support. _____
12. The growing ideological divide between political parties, making compromise difficult. _____
13. The danger of pursuing unrealistic objectives that may lead to harmful actions or disappointment. _____
14. Another term for data smog that refers to the difficulty in processing excessive information. _____
15. Athletes can interact directly with fans and share personal experiences, breaking barriers between them. _____
16. False or misleading information spread online, often exacerbated by selective exposure and confirmation bias. _____
17. A state where an individual feels unable or unwilling to share their emotions with others. _____
18. An imagined society characterized by human misery, oppression, and a lack of freedom. _____
19. The overwhelming amount of information available online, makes it difficult to distinguish between fact and fiction. _____
20. A common treatment method for internet addiction that focuses on changing the user's behavior patterns. _____
21. Information conveyed through text rather than spoken words. _____
22. Communication that lacks a clear path or direction, often seen in online interactions. _____
23. The degree to which communication fosters a sense of being together in a shared environment. _____
24. Online platforms (e.g., Facebook, Twitter) used for sharing content and interacting with others. _____
25. The networks and relationships that provide value to individuals and organizations. _____

26. Engaging in activities related to governance and political processes. _____
27. Volunteering or donating to support community projects. _____
28. Joining community organizations to improve social skills and networks. _____
29. Tools that allow users to communicate in real-time, bridging distances. _____
30. The content conveyed through communication, including thoughts and emotions expressed verbally and non-verbally. _____
31. Connections that involve individuals at different levels of societal hierarchy. _____
32. A type of communication that occurs between two or more people, involving verbal and non-verbal messages. _____
33. A global network of interrelated systems that facilitates communication and information sharing. _____
34. Civic participation facilitated through online platforms. _____
35. Objectives aimed at enhancing access to information and promoting community development through technology. _____
36. The response from the receiver that indicates their understanding of the message. _____
37. Providing personal time and effort to meet community needs. _____
38. The environment or setting in which communication takes place, affecting how messages are conveyed. _____
39. Facilities that provide access to technology for underserved communities. _____
40. Investigating social problems and resources within a community to identify solutions. _____
41. The individuals engaged in the process of communication, including the sender and receiver. _____
42. Activities that individuals or groups participate in to promote civic values in their community. _____
43. Groups like Philippine Red Cross, Gawad Kalinga, and Greenpeace Philippines that promote community welfare and environmental advocacy. _____
44. The medium through which messages are transmitted, such as phone calls or written text. _____
45. Enhancing community resources and capabilities to address specific issues. _____
46. Relationships that connect individuals from different backgrounds. _____
47. Close connections among people with shared culture and ethnicity. _____
48. Internal or external factors that hinder effective communication between the sender and receiver. _____
49. A characteristic of online communication where users' identities may be concealed. _____
50. Efforts to persuade decision-makers for the benefit of the community. _____