We know little about Cleopatra, but some information about her has survived. By the time she died at age 39, she had ruled Egypt for twenty years with the help of two powerful Romans. Today, archaeologists have started searching the Mediterranean near Alexandria, Cleopatra's home, for clues about her life. So far, they have brought up 20,000 objects from the sea. Many probably existed during Cleopatra's lifetime. On land nearby, other archaeologists have discovered new tombs, and there are signs that someone important may be buried there but no search has located Cleopatra.
