A Love Poem in Stone

[A] Often called "a love poem[1] in stone," the Taj Mahal is one of the most beautiful buildings ever made. It is also perhaps the most beautiful expression[2] of love in the world.

[B] The emperor Shah Jahan built the Taj Mahal for his empress, Mumtaz Mahal. They lived happily together for 18 years. Then, in 1631, Mumtaz died during the birth of their fourteenth child. Before she died, the emperor made her a promise. To remember her, he would build the most beautiful monument in the world.

[C] Building the Taj Mahal was a huge task. It is said that it took more than 20,000 people and 1,000 elephants. They worked for over 20 years to build the monument and its central dome.[3]

[D] In 1658, five years after the building was finished, Shah Jahan's son became emperor. He put Shah Jahan in prison.[4] Shah Jahan stayed there until his death in 1666. His body was then put in the Taj Mahal with the woman he loved.

[E] There are many legends about the Taj Mahal. In one story, Shah Jahan had the builders' hands cut off after the building was complete. This was supposedly done so they could never build anything as beautiful as the Taj Mahal. Another says he also wanted to build a black Taj Mahal. These are interesting stories, but they are probably not true.

[F] The love story between Shah Jahan and his wife ended sadly. But the monument to their love still stands today. Millions of tourists visit every year. They come to see the marble change color in the light of the rising sun or a full moon.

Boldt Castle

[A] Once upon a time, a young German teenager headed across the Atlantic Ocean for the United States. Arriving in New York City in 1864, George Boldt got his first job working in a hotel kitchen and quickly worked his way up in the hotel industry. Twelve years later, Boldt met the love of his life, Louise Augusta Kehrer, and the two were married in 1877.

[B] After 20 years of marriage, Boldt had become a millionaire and bought his very own island in New York. As a token of his love, Boldt decided to build his wife a castle on the island. In 1900, many builders and artists helped him start work on the huge project. Four years later, however, tragedy struck.

[C] Boldt's wife Louise died of a heart problem at 42 years of age. Heartbroken, Boldt stopped the construction. Workers went home, and the castle was left unfinished. After George Boldt died, a local company took control of the property, and in 1977, construction began again. Millions of dollars were spent on the building. Eventually, it looked like George Boldt may have originally imagined.

[D] Although George and Louise Boldt never got to enjoy their beautiful castle, many other couples have begun their own love stories on the island. Today, Boldt Castle is a popular tourist destination for weddings and romantic vacations. Through couples like these, Boldt's love story lives on.
