Ichabod Crane in Sleepy Hollow

Not far from the village of Tarry Town there is a quiet place. It is a little valley near the hills. This quiet place is called Sleepy Hollow.

Sometimes the people of this place see strange things. They hear music and voices in the air. They tell many stories about ghosts. One story is about the ghost of a soldier. The soldier is buried in the churchyard. They say his ghost has no head. At night, his ghost leaves the churchyard. He goes to the place of his battle. There he looks for the head he lost in the fight. The ghost is called the Headless Horseman of Sleepy Hollow.

At one time, a man by the name of Ichabod Crane lived in Sleepy Hollow. He was a teacher from Connecticut. Crane was very tall and thin. He had long arms and legs. He had big ears, large green eyes, and a long pointed nose. Crane loved books.

Crane's schoolhouse was made of logs. It was only one room. He made sure the children did what they were told. Sometimes he would help the smaller boys get back home. Most of the time the boys had pretty sisters or mothers who could cook and make things.

Ichabod's nose could smell good food from far away.

Ichabod could not pay for a house of his own. He stayed one week with each of the school children. He lived on their farms. They made room for Ichabod and his books. He would help cut wood for the fire. He would take the horses to get water. He would sing the babies to sleep.

Ichabod gave the children singing lessons. He would sing at church every Sunday. Ichabod felt very good about his singing and his schoolhouse.
