A new exhibit called “Woof: A Celebration of Dogs” is open at the Lynn Museum in King’s Lynn, England. This special exhibit tells the story of how dogs and humans have been connected for thousands of years. Visitors can see all kinds of interesting objects, like a coat made of dog fur, old coins, and even part of an ancient Egyptian coffin. There are also paintings that show people with their pets from hundreds of years ago.

One of the most exciting things in the exhibit is a gold Roman ring with a picture of dogs on it. The ring tells the story of a brave man named Meleager, who hunted a wild pig with his loyal dogs.

The museum has fun activities for visitors too, like puzzles, colourings pages, and books about dogs. Dayna Woolbright, who helped create the exhibit, says that dogs have always been important to people. They have helped humans hunt, herd animals, and even protect their homes. She also said that dogs have been our companions, making us happy and cheering us up.

The “Woof” exhibit will be open until March 2025, so there’s plenty of time to visit and learn more about our furry friends!
