Simply Entertainment?

Many youngsters (0) these days easily devote more time to the box than they (1) _____ to any other form of entertainment. Each year children read less and less and watch television more and more. In fact, a typical child sits through an average of about four hours of TV viewing a day. They spend more time on this form of entertainment (2) _____ they spend talking to parents, playing with friends, attending school or reading books.

According to a recent study, sixty-two percent of television programmes contain scenes of violence. It would be logical then to assume that watching a steady flow of violent images on screen cannot (3) _____ seen simply as entertainment. The bright colours, quick movements and sudden flashes will always capture a child's attention and there are certainly very (4) _____ children who find television totally uninteresting.

If we listen to the experts, it seems that viewing large amounts of TV violence does not necessarily cause a child to act in a violent (5) _____, but can lead to the view that violence (6) _____ acceptable in everyday life, as well as possibly creating a fear of being attacked on the streets.

With governments finally (7) _____ measures to improve the quality of children's TV, parents must now become aware that (8) _____ many hours of viewing can have serious effects (9) _____ a child's behavior and attitude. Obviously, turning off the set (10) _____ be the best solution in the end.
