2. Read and choose the correct answer:

Eight million tonnes of plastic are thrown into the oceans each year. This means that by 2050, there will be more bits of plastic than fish in seawater. What can be done?
Did you know that sportswear, such as trainers, jackets, swimwear, leggings, T-shirts and bags can be made from recycled plastic found in oceans and rivers? The plastic is brown down into pellets and then the pellets are made into thread. The thread is used to make material for clothes. This process is called " upcycling" because you're recycling waste material to make something new, which is good news for the environment. Some people define upcycling as " creative reuse".
There's a Spanish fashion company that makes shoes from waste plastic and algae. Each pair of shoes is made from 5 plastic bottles. The plastic is processed into thread for making clothe. The thread is used to make the upper part of the shoe. The shoes are simple and comfortable, they can be produced easily and they look very stylish.
it's a win-win situation because removing the algae also allows clean water in rivers and lakes to circulate more freely, which helps to improve plant and animal habits.
