

The Black Cat by Edgar Allan Poe. (III)

Fill in the blanks with the words from the box.

From that moment on, the cat never left the narrator's _____.
For that reason, he started feeling completely _____.
One day, as he was going down the stairs to the _____, he nearly fell down because of the _____ so he tried to kill it. However, his wife stopped him and so he brought the _____ on her head and killed her. After thinking of several ways to _____ the body, he finally hid it in one of the _____ of the cellar.
The cat _____ and so the narrator started feeling happy and _____. After a few days, the _____ came for a visit and as they were looking for the woman, they heard a _____ behind the wall. They _____ the wall and found the woman's body. The _____ was standing on her head. The narrator was sent to the _____.

gallows – side – evil – broke down – cellar – cat – scream – axe – police – kill – disappeared – free – hide – walls – cat