MY FAVORITE FICTIONAL DETECTIVE OF ALL TIME

1. Write the correct general structure of each paragraph in the large box on the left
2. Order each paragraph correctly in the small box on the right

structure:

What really stands out about Sherlock is his piercing eyes. They seem like they can see every little detail that other people might miss. He also has a long, pointed nose that gives him a kind of thoughtful look. His hands are thin, and he uses them to carefully inspect clues when he's trying to solve a case. When he's not busy working, he enjoys playing the violin, which shows that he has a creative side too.

structure:

Sherlock Holmes is a well-known detective character from stories written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He's famous for being incredibly smart and solving mysteries that no one else can figure out.

structure:

Overall, Sherlock Holmes is a character who stands out because of his intelligence, attention to detail, and unique personality. He's always thinking ahead, and that's what makes him one of the most famous detectives in literature!

structure:

Sherlock Holmes is very tall and thin, with a sharp jawline, which make him look serious and focused. He usually wears a long coat and sometimes a deerstalker hat, though that's more from movies and shows than the books themselves. He's often seen smoking a pipe, which has become one of his trademarks.

3. Write at least 10 adjectives you found in each paragraph
