Message in bottle arrives after 101 years

German sailors (1) have been finding/have found a bottle containing a message on a postcard which was thrown into the Baltic Sea 101 years ago. It is believed that this is the oldest message in a bottle that the world (2) has ever seen/has ever been seeing. The bottle (3) hasn't suffered/hasn't been suffering any damage, despite floating in the sea for 101 years, although some of the writing on the postcard inside (4) has become/has been becoming impossible to read. Experts who (5) have tried/have been trying to work out what the complete message says say they (6) haven't succeed/haven't been succeeded yet, but hope to in the near future. By looking at the address on the postcard, they (7) have identified/have been identified its author as Richard Platz, the 20-year-old son of a baker. A handwriting comparison with letters written by Platz (8) has confirmed/has been confirming that he is the author. The researchers (9) have also found/have also been finding his granddaughter, Angela Erdmann, who (10) has lived/has been living in Berlin for 40 years. They (11) have presented/have been presented her with the bottle, which will be displayed in a museum. She says that since the discovery, she (12) has looked/has been looking through family papers to find out more about her grandfather, who she never met.
