

Read the comments and then answer the questions.

Carlos

I never buy eggs that come from battery farms. They have no flavour.

Beth

I can't be bothered cooking. I just buy ready-made meals and tins of stuff.

Rowan

It worries me that farm animals are sometimes treated so badly.

Hannah

I can't eat curry. It makes me come out in red spots.

Thomas

I want my food to be 100% natural.

Atsuko

I always buy coffee that gives growers in developing countries a decent price.

- 1 Who is concerned about animal welfare?
- 2 Who wants food without additives?
- 3 Who uses a fair trade product?
- 4 Who has a food allergy?
- 5 Who uses convenience foods?
- 6 Who prefers a free-range product?

Describing food products

Look for the meaning of these words

- What is the meaning of...?

Food production has become increasingly industrialised and globalised, and so knowing what our food contains has become more and more important. Labels do not always help. Adjectives such as 'wholesome¹', 'farm fresh' and 'homemade' can be rather vague and meaningless, while the international numbering system for additives² is often incomprehensible to people. Some familiar descriptions, however, do have a clear official meaning, for example 'wholefoods³', 'free-range⁴ eggs', 'gluten-free⁵ bread' or 'contains no artificial colours or preservatives⁶'. Clear and scientifically accurate descriptions can be vital for people who suffer from food allergies⁷ and for vegetarians or vegans⁸ who want to know exactly what is in a product, as well as being important for consumers looking for natural or unprocessed⁹ foods, or those concerned about animal welfare¹⁰ who may wish to avoid food produced by battery-farming¹¹ methods and so on. With the growth in popularity of convenience foods¹², alongside public health concerns over bad diet and obesity, simple and unambiguous nutrition labels¹³ are more important than ever. An example of a simple system is traffic-light labelling¹⁴, which indicates high (red), medium (amber) or low (green) levels of such things as fat, sugar and salt. Finally, good labelling tells us where the food was produced and under what conditions, for example fair trade¹⁵ products.

1. a way of buying and selling products that makes certain that the original producer receives a fair price
2. chemicals used to stop food from decaying
3. condition that makes a person become ill or develop skin or breathing problems because they have eaten certain foods or been near certain substances. The related adjective is allergic (to).
4. foods that are almost ready to eat or are quick to prepare
5. foods that have not had any of their natural features taken away or any artificial substances added
6. good for you
7. labels that indicate how the food influences your health
8. labels with colours like traffic lights that give information on nutrition
9. not containing a protein which is contained in wheat and some other grains
10. person who does not eat or use any animal products, such as meat, fish, eggs or cheese
11. produced by farm animals that are allowed to move around outside and are not kept in cages or stalls
12. substance added to food to improve its taste or appearance or to preserve it
13. system of producing a large quantity of eggs or meat cheaply by keeping a lot of birds in rows of small cages
14. taking care of animals
15. which have not been treated with chemicals that preserve them or give them extra taste or colour

Complete the sentences. The first letter of the missing word is given.

- 1 The label gave no n..... information, so I didn't know if it was good for me.
- 2 The t..... - system of labelling is easy to understand with just three familiar colours.
- 3 I try to make my diet as w..... as possible and not eat things which I know are bad for me.
- 4 It's sometimes difficult to find u..... foods – everything seems to contain chemicals or preservatives of some kind.
- 5 My sister has to have a g..... - diet as wheat makes her ill.
- 6 The laws governing b..... f..... were changed recently and birds must have larger cages now.
- 7 I'm a vegetarian but I don't think I could ever become a v..... . I would find the diet too restrictive.
- 8 My diet is mostly natural foods because I buy a lot of w..... .