A Day in the Life of Sarah

My name's Ben. My sister Sarah is a teacher. She's not famous, but last year she taught a class with some very talented students. It was a great experience. It was the most rewarding job she's ever had. In the class, students learn about science!

One day, Sarah was at the school with some other teachers and students. She had to supervise a science experiment. The students were mixing chemicals, and Sarah was watching carefully. A student accidentally spilled some chemicals on the floor. The school janitor was nearby. He didn't see what happened, but he noticed the mess and shouted, 'Who did this?' He quickly called the school principal to report the accident. The principal asked Sarah lots of questions about the spill.
