PART 3. Read the text to decide if each statement is TRUE or FALSE.

Questions 16-25

A Song Becomes a Hit

What makes a song become a popular hit? Do you think hit songs are popular because they are great songs? Researchers say that hit songs become popular because listeners care about what other people think. For most listeners, the quality of the song is not important.

A recent online study looked at how we choose our music. It showed that a song's popularity influences our choices. In other words, we like to listen to the music that our peers enjoy. In the study, researchers gave a list of 48 unknown songs to 14,000 teenagers. The participants listened to some of the songs and rated them. They gave one star to the song that they didn't like and five stars to the song that they liked very much. The researchers divided the participants into two groups. The first group saw only the song title and the name of the band. They rated songs because the name of the song or the band looked interesting. After listening to the song, participants rated it with stars.

The second group received extra information. This group could also see the number of downloads for each song. The teenagers chose the songs with many downloads and gave them the most stars because they thought that these songs were favourite with their peers. They were not interested in the quality of the song. They just wanted to listen to the songs that their peers liked. However, the researchers made up the number of downloads for each song. The songs showing the most downloads weren't really popular. In fact, these songs weren't very good, according to music experts.

So why did participants give the most stars to the songs that seemed popular? One of the authors of the study, Mathew Salganik, a researcher at Columbia University in New York, says: "people are faced with too many options in the case of 48 songs. Since you can't listen to all of them, a natural shortcut is to listen to what other people are listening to".

Salganik also says that people want to know what others are listening to and they enjoy discussing and sharing music with their friends. So it isn't necessary for a popular book or a song to be of good quality. Then these people influence their friends. As a result, the popularity of a song or book spreads soon and that song will even become a big hit.

Today the Internet lets people share their opinions about movies, books, and music almost instantly. People write about music on social networking sites, post comments on the web, or read readers' reviews. On the Internet, a person can easily see how many people bought a book or downloaded a song. Perhaps this information has more influence on our choices than we think.

Tips for traveling with children

Here are some things you can bring on your trip that are sure to keep children occupied and relaxed during a long flight.

* Paper with colored pencils or crayons

This allows parents and children to do activities together, or for children to do something independently. With blank paper and colored pencils or crayons, children can write, draw, or make their own games. For more excitement, pack small figures to use as board-game pieces in your carry-on luggage and let children design their own game boards.

* A deck of cards

Parents can teach children their favorite card game or show them card tricks. In return, children can do the same for parents.

* Books

It is always a good idea to pack a book on a long trip. Children will especially enjoy stories that take place in the country to which they are traveling. This will give them a chance to preview the culture and history they will learn about on vacation.

* Gifts from Pristine Air

Once your international flight has taken off, a flight attendant will offer any children traveling with us a picture map of the world and a souvenir passport with stickers that children can affix once they have visited a country. There is also a children's airline magazine in the pouch in front of your seat.

32. According to the information, what is difficult for children?
- A. Long car rides
  - B. International flights
  - C. Going shopping with parents
  - D. Waiting for doctor's appointments.
33. What are children encouraged to make?
- A. A schedule
  - B. A game board
  - C. A shopping list
  - D. A family portrait
34. What is mentioned as a possible activity?
- a. Taking a walk
  - B. Singing songs
  - C. Playing cards
  - D. Watching a movie
35. What is NOT offered to children?
- b. A map
  - B. Snacks
  - C. Stickers
  - D. A magazine

Questions 36-40 refer to the following note:

Increasing numbers of parents in the US are choosing to teach their kids at home. The US Department of Education estimated that in 1999, around 850,000 children were being homeschooled. Originally, homeschooling was used for students who couldn't attend school because of learning difficulties. Today, however, more parents are taking on the responsibility of educating their children at home due to dissatisfaction with the educational system relating to class size or problems inside the classroom, for example violence.

Advocates of homeschooling believe that children learn better when they are in a secure, loving environment. They can also pick and choose what and when to study, which enables them to learn at their own pace. In contrast, critics of homeschooling say that children who are not in classroom miss out on learning important social skills because they have little interaction with their peers. Moreover, they have raised concerns about the ability of parents to teach their kids effectively because they are not competent educators and have no teacher training.

Whatever the arguments for or against it, homeschooling in the USA is growing. There are now websites, support groups that enable parents to learn more about educating children. Homeschooling today is an accepted alternative to an educational system that some believe is failing.

36. What is the topic of the above selection?
- A. Different ideas about homeschooling.
  - B. A new way to learn in the USA: Homeschooling.
  - C. The advantages of getting education at home.
  - D. Parents in the USA want to teach their children at home.
37. One of the reasons why parents don't want to send children to school is that
- A. there are too many pupils in a class.
  - B. children learn what they choose.
  - C. there is violence at home.
  - D. parents want to be good educators.
38. The underlined word peers in paragraph 2 means
- A. members.
  - B. classmates.
  - C. groups
  - D. partners
39. Parents can learn more to teach their children effectively from
- A. the Department of Education.
  - B. their social skills.
  - C. the present educational system.
  - D. websites.
40. From the passage, we can know that
- A. homeschooling is only for troubled children.
  - B. few parents take their children out of class in the USA.
  - C. homeschooling is acceptable in the USA.
  - D. traditional education is the best in the USA.
