Test 5 Reading Part 4

Questions 16–20

Five sentences have been removed from the text below. For each question, choose the correct answer. There are three extra sentences which you do not need to use.

A new way of making electricity

Ever since the 19th century, when people were developing different ways of creating electricity, companies have looked for improved ways of producing power, using cleaner and more efficient methods.

Now a UK company called Pavegen has been working on technology that could be widely used in the future to produce electricity. 16 The company has developed a special type of floor, made of square tiles. Underneath each square, there's a system that can produce a certain amount of electricity very cheaply – from the energy created every time someone steps on it!

The creator of the floor, Laurence Kemball-Cook, came up with the idea when he was a student, and did some work experience with an energy company. The company asked him to investigate ways of providing street lighting in city centres, using energy from the sun to produce electricity.

17 One reason was that many city centres don't get enough sunlight, because of all the tall buildings. Then he thought of a better plan.

18 The right technology could be used to convert this energy into electricity – right under people's feet!

The design of the floor is actually extremely effective. 19 And the reason is that a lot of energy is produced simply because of the large numbers of people walking across the floor. In fact, the special squares are already in place in several locations with high numbers of pedestrians. These include big department stores and also an airport.

The flooring can have other uses too, such as recording how many people visit a shopping centre at particular times. 20 For example, shop owners in the centre would be interested in knowing at which times of days they have the highest customer numbers. So the next time you visit a big shopping centre, have a careful look at the floor that you're walking across!

- A But that isn't the end of the story.
- B This kind of information is very useful for certain people.
- C Why not use the energy created by pedestrians instead?
- D However, one big problem could be cost.
- E And it's actually based on a simple idea.
- F This is especially true when it's been used in very busy areas.
- G But it soon became clear that this might not work.
- H This new system should work even better.

Part 3: You are going to read an article about people reflecting on their experiences reconnecting with family members after a long time. For questions 43–52, choose from the people (A–D). The people may be chosen more than once.

| 52. describes a family member as having a job they didn't expect? | 52. _____ |

A. Daniel Clarke

When I saw my cousin Liam again after so many years, I couldn't believe how much he'd changed. He's grown into such a thoughtful and accomplished person, which is not what I would have expected from the wild teenager I used to know. Talking with him made me reflect on how much I could achieve if I were more focused. We're still very different in many ways, but I can't deny he inspires me to approach my work and relationships with a fresh perspective.

C. Jason Lee

I'll admit I was hesitant when my brother reached out to me. We hadn't spoken in years, and I wasn't sure if it would be worth it. But when we finally met up, it was like no time had passed. We talked for hours about our childhood and shared so many laughs. He even showed me photos of his life now, and I was stunned to learn he's now a manager at a tech company. Back in school, he was never one for responsibility, so it's amazing to see how far he's come.

B. Elena Garcia

Reconnecting with my sister Maria wasn't easy at first. There had been some arguments in the past that left me uncertain about reaching out. But when I finally did, I was so glad. We quickly got past our differences and realized how much we still have in common. For instance, we both love painting, which was something we used to do together as children. It's been amazing to rediscover that connection, and I'm determined to make sure we never lose touch again.

D. Fiona Bennett

I hadn't seen my aunt in over a decade, and I wasn't sure what to expect when we met again. But the moment we started talking, it was like we had never been apart. She told me about all the challenges she'd faced and overcome, and I felt so inspired. Seeing how she's built a happy life despite everything made me rethink some of my own priorities. I've even started working on a few long-term goals of my own, thanks to her encouragement.
