

7 What a view!

Before you read

1. Which mountain is the highest mountain in the world?
2. How high do you think it is?
3. Do you know who the first people to reach the top of the mountain were?

Reading

- 1 'We look up. For weeks, for months, that is all we have done. Look up. And there it is – the top of Everest. Only it is different now: so near, so close...It is no longer just a dream.'
- 2 In 1953 Edmund Hillary and Tenzing Norgay were the first people to reach the top of Mount Everest. Tenzing Norgay is describing here how he felt when they were 300 metres from the top of the mountain. It was 6.30 in the morning. Five hours later, after a slow, hard climb through the snow and ice, the two men reached the highest place in the world. The view was incredible. All around them the men could see the Himalayan Mountains. They had to look down to see the white tops of some of the highest mountains in the world.
- 3 Many people dream about going to the top of Mount Everest. Climbing Mount Everest, though, is very dangerous. Even in the warmest month, July, the average temperature at the top of the mountain is about -19°C . Very strong winds and storms can start suddenly. And avalanches of snow and ice often fall down the mountain, burying everything in their path.
- 4 Around 200 people have died on the mountain, but every year people continue to come from all over the world to climb it. Some want to see the view that Norgay and Hillary saw. Most, though, just want to climb the highest mountain on Earth.
