Conjunctions

and, but, or, so, and because

Conjunctions are Linking words, such as 'and', 'but', 'or', 'so' and 'because: They show a link between words or groups of words in a sentence.

Use and to add things together.

I like to eat apples and bananas. I can run and jump.

Use but to show how things are different

I'm tall but my brother is short. I like bananas but I don't like apples.

Use or to show choice between things.

Would you like to watch T.V. or play a game?

In the morning I drink milk or orange juice.

Use so to show result of an action. After so comes the result.

1st cause so 2nd result

I'm hungry, so I'll eat a snack.

He has lost the game so he's sad.

Use because to show the reason why things happened

2nd result because 1st cause

He is happy because he has won the match.

Compare these sentences:
Yesterday, I was sick, so I stayed in bed.
Yesterday, I stayed in bed because I was sick.
Notice that we put a comma before so not before because.
Also because always answers the question why?
Why did you stay in bed yesterday? Because I was sick.
