- If there are difficulties in understanding the exercises from the test paper, the teacher will offer additional explanation.
- There are two students (C. and D.) that have an adapted school curriculum because of their deficiencies.
- Both have difficulties in recognizing the letters, in reading and writing (dysgraphia and dyslexia).
- Because of their deficiencies and their borderline intellectual functioning, it is difficult for them to acquire a new language. That is why I have decided to use an easier version for the test, and by the end of the lesson they will be able just to recognize buildings and tracing very simple words.
