Dinner by Post

Last year I went out with Helen for four months. We were very different. I always arrived early; she always arrived late. I was very tidy; she was terribly untidy. But to be honest, I found these differences very attractive.

At first, she was only fifteen or twenty minutes late. But she got later and later. At the end of August, it was my birthday. I'm a good cook, so I decided to have a dinner party and I invited four friends.

That evening, my four friends arrived on time, but obviously Helen wasn't there at eight o'clock. But then she wasn't there at nine o'clock, half past nine or ten o'clock.

This was extremely late and I thought: "Something's happened to Helen." I decided to phone her mobile. When she answered, I could hear music playing loudly. "Where are you?" I shouted angrily. "I'm at a night club," she shouted back. I was furious. I went into the kitchen and put her meal into a plastic bag.

The next morning I sent it to her with a note saying, "Here's your dinner." A week later, I got a postcard from Helen. It said, "You forgot the nuts in the salad."
