Public Enemy Number 1

The early 1930s were called the 'public enemy era' in the United States because there were so many robbers, murderers and outlaws on the roads. There 1 probably wouldn't have been (probably/not be) so many outlaws if the times

(not be) so hard, but this was the period of the Great Depression when millions of Americans were poor and unemployed. If twenty-one-year-old John Dillinger

(find) a job, he 4 _____ (probably/not commit) his first crime, the theft of $50 from a grocery store. Dillinger was sentenced to ten years in prison. If his father 5 _____ (not tell) young John to admit to the crime, he 6 _____ (probably/not go) to prison at all. By the time Dillinger came out of prison in 1933, he had decided to follow a life of crime. He formed the Dillinger Gang with people he had met in prison. If he 7 _____ (not spend) so long in prison, he 8 _____ (probably/not know) so many other criminals! They carried out lots of violent bank robberies and killed a policeman in Florida. John Dillinger was Public Enemy Number 1. Unfortunately for Dillinger, however, that made him a target for a new organization called the FBI, the Federal Bureau of Investigation. If FBI agents 9 _____ (not start) following his gang, John Dillinger 10 _____ (might/escape). However, he was recognized by FBI agents as he left a theatre in Chicago, and they shot and killed him.
