

March 7, 1965

What do you notice in each picture? Write 3 sentences.

Next, write 2 questions you have about each photo.

Details I Notice

1) _____

2) _____

3) _____

Two Questions I Have

1) _____

2) _____

Details I Notice

1) _____

2) _____

3) _____

Two Questions I Have

1) _____

2) _____

Details I Notice

1) _____

2) _____

3) _____

Two Questions I Have

1) _____

2) _____

Retell the events of "Bloody Sunday."

March 7, 1965 is called "Bloody Sunday." Look at the first photo. Write 5 sentences that describe the people and what happened.

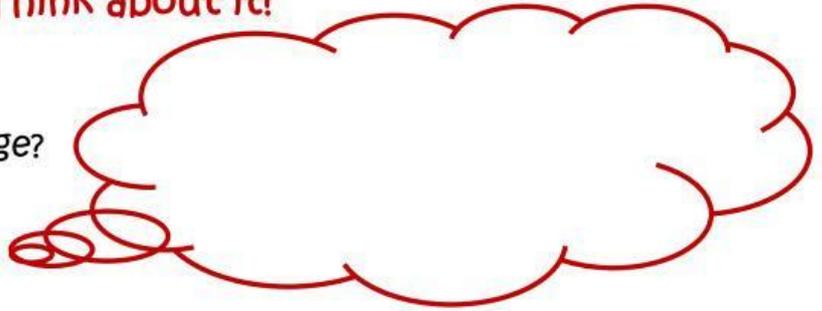

"Bloody Sunday" began when _____

Look at the second photo. Write 5 sentences.
Describe the people and what happened.

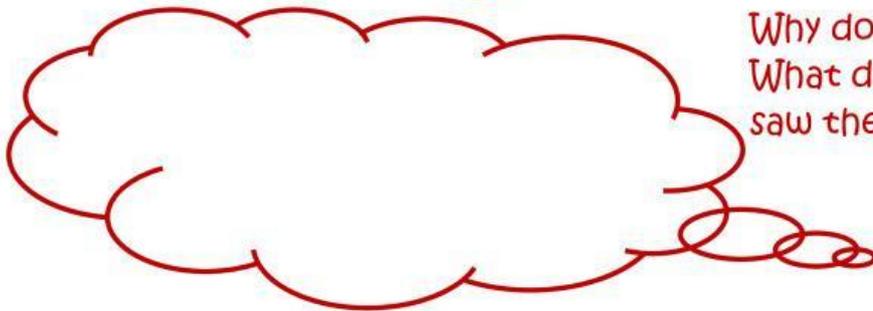

Look at the third photo. Write 5 sentences.
Describe the people and what happened.

Think about it!

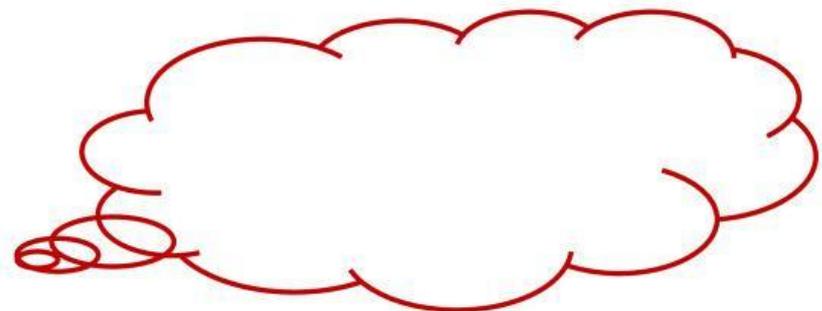

Why do you think so many people were crossing the bridge?

Why do you think the police came?
What did the people do when they saw the police?

Who had weapons?
Why do you think we call this day Bloody Sunday?

Watch this video. The person who is telling the story was there.

In your native language, what is the word for “violent?” _____
John Lewis (the narrator) says that the people who were walking were “non-violent.” What does he mean? _____

Did the police and soldiers have a reason to attack the people? ____
Explain. _____ How did you feel while watching the police and soldiers attack the people? _____

What right did the people want? _____ Why were the people walking? _____

John Lewis tell us that they knew the walk or “march” might be dangerous. The people marched because they strongly believed they should have their rights. Is there anything so important to you that you would put yourself in danger as these people did? ____ Explain. _____

TV reporters took videos of this event. All over the world, people saw what happened. Most people in the U.S. had not understood how badly black people were treated. After Bloody Sunday, many white people started demanding (asking strongly) rights for black people. Because brave people marched on March 7, 1965, the U.S. made more laws to protect black people.

Many of the people walking were badly hurt. The police believed that had won. In your opinion, who won? _____ Explain. _____
