

Vocabulary training

Climate and Weather

Decide if the sentence makes sense or not. Choose the correct option: "Makes sense" or "Makes no sense."

1. The temperature will reach 38°C tomorrow—it's going to be boiling hot!
2. After three weeks of freezing weather, the ice on the roads started to thaw.
3. We are expecting some heavy precipitation tomorrow, so don't forget to bring your sunglasses.
4. Extreme weather conditions, like hurricanes and tornadoes, often cause serious damage.
5. The temperature will drop to -15°C tonight, so don't forget to wear a warm coat.
6. The fog was really thick, making it hard to see the road.
7. There was a heat wave last week, and we even had to scrape ice off our car windows.
8. The hailstorm was so strong that it shattered the car's windshield.
9. The humidity was so high that my skin felt dry and rough.
10. The avalanche buried part of the ski resort under tons of snow.
11. The gale-force winds were so strong that they knocked over a tree in our backyard.
12. The volcano eruption covered the nearby town in a thick layer of ash cloud.
13. The mild climate of the Arctic region makes it perfect for growing bananas and pineapples.
14. The forecast says the weather will cool down in the evening, so you might need a sweater.
15. After a dry spell, we were snowed in and couldn't leave the house for three days.
16. A tornado hit the town, and people were excited to go outside and fly their kites.
17. The wind started blowing stronger, creating huge waves in the ocean.
18. A tsunami warning was issued, and people rushed to the beach to take photos.
19. It was so cold that icicles were hanging from the rooftops.
20. During the storm, the thunder was so loud that it shook the windows.