Something exciting has happened in teenager Annika's life. She has changed how she spends her free time, and her story contains an important lesson for many young people.

Before Annika made the change, when she wasn't doing schoolwork or chores around the home, she went on social media, but she started feeling unhappy when she was doing this. Although she was talking to people most of the time she was online, she started to feel alone. She decided she had to do something about it.

Annika didn't call the people she met online her friends, and she didn't have any friends in the real world either. She spoke to some of the girls at her school, but she wasn't interested in their free-time activities. She felt that this was part of the problem, so she looked around for a club she could join after school. Finally, she joined an art club with people in her local area and also got a weekend job at a place which looked after pets
