UNIT 6: GENDER EUQUALITY

Read the text and answer the questions below.

Gender equality means that all people, regardless of whether they are male or female, have the same opportunities and rights. In many parts of the world, people are working hard to create a society where men and women are treated equally.

In the past, some jobs were seen as only for men or only for women. For example, many people thought that a surgeon should be a man, while a kindergarten teacher should be a woman. However, today, we understand that both men and women can succeed in any profession if they have the right skills and training. A woman can be a great surgeon, and a man can be a wonderful kindergarten teacher.

Gender equality is not just about jobs. It is also about how people are treated at home, in schools, and in society. Boys and girls should have equal chances to get a good education, play sports, and follow their dreams.

Although many countries have made progress, challenges still exist. In some places, girls do not have the same educational opportunities as boys. In others, women earn less money than men for doing the same work.

To achieve true gender equality, everyone must work together. Governments should create fair laws, schools should teach respect, and families should encourage both boys and girls to follow their dreams. When society gives everyone equal chances, we all benefit.
