A New Friend

Summer holidays were over and Peter entered his classroom on the first day of school. Among the crowd of students, he saw a new boy sitting quietly at the back. Peter noticed that the new boy felt unsure. So, he decided to come closer. With a friendly smile, he introduced himself and asked the boy's name.

As they began to talk, Peter discovered that the boy's name was Alex and that he had just moved to the city from a far-off town. Alex shared stories about his previous school and the fun activities he loved to do, such as playing soccer and drawing. Peter listened with interest, sharing tales of his own adventures. Soon they understood that they had much in common. For example, they both loved comics about superheroes and video games.

During the day, Peter and Alex continued to get closer. They took part in classroom activities and played during breaktime. Also, Peter introduced Alex to other classmates. The atmosphere was friendly and the boys laughed a lot. From that day on Peter and Alex became the best friends.
