"No, what's it about?" Tom replied.

"It's called 'Born Free'," Sophie explained. "They help animals that are in trouble because people have changed their homes. Like, when people cut down forests or build things in places where animals live."

"Any kind that's in danger of disappearing or having nowhere to live," Sophie answered. "Like animals in the rainforest, the desert, or other places around the world."

"I think we should be careful about how we treat the environment," Tom said. "It's not just people who suffer when things change, animals do too."

"Exactly," Sophie agreed. "You can give money to 'Born Free' through their website to help make better homes for animals that are in trouble. But it's expensive to do all this work."

"Can people help out by doing work for the group?" Tom asked.

"Yeah, they love volunteers!" Sophie said. "It's a good way to learn more about animals and help their homes. You should check it out if you're interested!"
